4. The rapid spread of technology-mediated learning has set off fits of praise and concern - yet the U.S.'s traditional centers of higher education have mostly failed to confront the pace of change and the implications for students. There is probably no is way anyone can keep up with this transformation: The technology is simply evolving too rapidly. Nevertheless, we keep trying. Will these developments truly serve our goals for advanced education? We need to know urgently.

The More Time That Children Chat on Social Media, the Less Happy They Feel

3. The cell phone is a great invention, but it seems to have become a bit of a nuisance in our daily lives. There is usually a notice on the door of the meeting room, which reads, "Please turn off your cell phones." However, phones ring now and then during the meeting. Ordinary people like us do not have many important things to handle. Still, we will not switch off our phones easily. Keeping our phones on symbolizes our connection with this world. To a certain extent, the cell phone reflects our "thirst for socialization"

3. Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM) has a long history of more than 5,000 years. It is a collection of the experience of working people over many centuries of struggle against diseases. TCM considers the human body as unity of QI, XING and SHEN. The diagnostic process of TCM distinguishes itself by "observation / inspection, auscultation and olfaction, inquiry and pulse diagnosis". TCM employs Chinese herbal medicine, acupuncture and many other treatments to make the human body harmonious between YIN and YANG. The concepts of YIN-YANG and Wu XING laid a theoretical foundation for TCM. WU XING refers to five basic substances in Nature, namely, metal, wood, water, fire, and earth.

4. In the rich and middle-income countries that make up the OECD, the average wage of a woman working full-time is 85% that of a man. This is not because employers pay a woman less than they would have paid a man in her place. Data from 25 countries collected by a consultancy show that women earn 98% as much as men who do the same job for the same employer. The real reason is twofold. Firstly, women outnumber men in positions with lower salaries and little chance of promotion; secondly, men and women are segregated in occupations and industries, and those where women predominate are paid less.

Artificial Intelligence (AI) was coined by John McCarthy, an American computer scientist, in 1956 at The Dartmouth Conference. Today, it is an umbrella term that includes everything from robotic process automation to actual robotics. It has gained prominence recently due, in part, to big data, or the increase in speed, size and variety of data that businesses are now collecting. AI can perform tasks such as identifying patterns in the data more efficiently than humans, enabling businesses to gain more insight out of their data.

3.
Early books about sales techniques included key words like ethics, service, relationships, and hard work. These all led to the idea of building a friendship with your customers. Later, door-to-door salesmen discovered that they could increase their sales by using specific words and specific persuasion methods. This led to the perfecting and proliferation of sales techniques that focused not on the customer's needs or building a relationship, but on closing techniques and methods that helped complete a one-time sale.
